

CSA Is The Only Way

Your Mother always told you to eat your vegetables, and to share with others. Well, now you can follow two principles in one step when you become a member of CSA farming in Greeley through Grant Farms. Sound too good to be true? Let us explain.

Community Supported Agriculture (CSA) is a fancy term for the exchange that happens when a local farm partners with the surrounding community to bring fresh produce directly to the people.

Here is how it works. Members of a community buy shares of that year's harvest from the local farm, thus agreeing to "share" in the costs of running the farm and sowing the seeds of future greens. All this is in return for the farm "sharing the plenty" of its fresh and deliciously diverse harvest.

Still sound too good to be true? Well then, allow us to introduce you to Grant Farms, Colorado's first certified organic farm and a proud participant in CSA. Located near the Wyoming border in the foothills of the Rocky Mountains, Grant Farms had their humble beginning in the 1960's growing vegetables, and has been the leading grower of completely organic produce and grains for the past 35 years.

And while they invite their members to tour the farm and join in the festivities of harvest, they bring their quality harvest right to convenient locations around Northern Colorado weekly; one of those locations being your very own Your Place Coffee.

This means you can receive fresh seasonal produce delivered practically to your doorstep. All you have to do is go to grantfarms.com and sign up for your share of the best bounty in the county.

An Open Book

Nothing sings the praises of a wonderful new book like a wonderful, neighborhood bookstore! And Your Place has found just the place to buy that new or used book. Located in the College Green Commons on 20th and 47th, An Open Book is not only home to various names and authors, but also boasts a cozy atmosphere of local quality, bearing much resemblance to the "Shop Around the Corner" in Hollywood's nostalgic hit, You've Got Mail. With monthly book signings for some of the finest authors like philanthropist Greg Mortenson, and best-selling author Sandra Dallas, this Greeley-grown store is the perfect place to peruse the shelves, meet the friendly staff, and crack open that book. And now, because we are crazy about having the perfect reading material to accompany your coffee, you can pick up a 20% off coupon at Your Place.
